What aspects of the course contributed most to your learning? Please be as specific as possible.

Study questions.

I believe the readings and forum posts contributed most to my learning. I was able to see different perspectives on the subject we were learning each week which I loved.

Discussion questions

Doing the reading notes and quizzes

I think the discussion forums were the best when it came to learning about ethics. The ability to read what others thought about the discussions topics, plus the response criteria and feedback that Prof. Shields provided made the discussions great.

Reasoning

the discussion boards

Online weekly discussions helped me learn the most during this course. It allowed me to explain my thoughts, read the ideas of others, and think through the different ins and outs of philosophical theories and arguments.

The force it provides me with to think out of the box.

The discussion posts and reading note assignments

The readings

The interaction with other students via the discussion board contributed a lot to my learning. It was interesting to learn about other opinions and think about how my opinion was challenged.

What suggestions do you have to improve this class?

More assignment reminders.

The only suggestion I have to improve this class is to encourage students to read ahead and stay on top of everything. I was able to stay on top of all my work.

None

have some sort of zoom style class to discuss what we are learning

I thought the class was very interesting and helpful. To improve the class, I would include one group project in which the group had to do a presentation over a philosophical theory. I think this will force students to work together and dive into deeper thinking.

none!

More office hours

Nothing; professor great, information well-rounded, critical thinking opportunities available.

Providing more a lecture than just a reading

Maybe some sort of presentation. Overall, I thought the class was really well run and the professor was very quick about getting back with students who had questions.
